Dear Mr. D:

I need hardly say that Mimi and I much enjoyed seeing you on Sunday and we certainly appreciated the time you were able to spend with us on what was a busy schedule. Your advice and encouragement to me in connection with my professional plans was most wise and heartening and I am now quite confirmed in my views on this question.

I trust you understood that I had no desire whatsoever to put you in an embarrassing position with regard to the Council on Foreign Relations matter we discussed. I quite understand the point of view of this organization and as a matter of fact had forgotten just how kind you had been in attempting to sponsor the cause of my friend. If, upon reflection, the possible step in connection with this matter which you were kind enough to suggest taking would in any way embarrass you, I would much appreciate your leaving this matter altogether alone.

Looking forward to seeing you again soon, and with kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,
